LONDON SPEECH AT PORTLAND AIDS WIN OF MAINE REPUBLICANS

PORTLAND, ME. — The Presidential election will be a choice between free enterprise under which the humblest citizen has a chance, and a system of invasion of private rights characterized by a million signs: "By Order of the American Government, Keep Off!" declared Gov. Alf M. Landon, in a speech before a vast throng here.

He defined the issues of the campaign:

"Do we want the Government prying into every little detail of our business lives?"

"Do we want the Government forbidding us to plant what we want in our own fields?"

"Or:

"Do we want to be free to plan for our future?"

"Do we want free government in America?"

Coming of European System.

Under the American system of free enterprise, Gov. Landon said, people have been free to plan for themselves and their children, knowing that their goal was limited only by their own ability, subject to no handicap of birth or class distinction. But, he pointed out: "Then came the N.R.A. With the enactment of this measure in 1933, our government, without mandate of the people, adopted a new and completely different philosophy. When I say 'new,' I mean new only in the sense that it was new to this country. It was a philosophy well known under the autocratic governments of Europe.

"This philosophy decreed that prices should be regulated," said Gov. Landon, "not by demand and supply, but by government edicts; that wages and hours of employees should be fixed, not by free and fair negotiations under rules assuring equality, but by officials in Washington; that the sort of competition which must be fostered, as the lifeblood of free enterprise, should in future be prohibited by law."

"What the N.R.A. really undertook to do in this country was to terminate our system of free competition, and to substitute for it a system of government-created and government-protected monopolies."

"The N.R.A. was the beginning in America of the movement which, throughout the world, has been sweeping aside private enterprise in favor of government control—a movement which has been substituting arbitrary personal authority for constitutional self-government."

"But—you may say—the N.R.A. is dead."

"True enough. The National Industrial Recovery Act is dead, thanks to the courage and integrity of the Supreme Court."

"But the spirit of the N.R.A. lives on. It lives on in recently enacted laws. It lives on in the efforts of the Administration to get around the decisions of the Supreme Court. It lives on in this Administration's 1936 platform. It lives on in the recent public utterances of the President and his spokesmen."

May Lead to War.

Gov. Alf M. Landon

A striking likeness of the Republican candidate for President in this new crayon portrait, heretofore unpublished, the work of Artist Alfred Frazer.

"But above all, it lives on in the spirit of the President who has confessed no error—who has let it be clearly known that he considered it would be a catastrophe if the American farmer should 'once more become a lord on his own farm'."

"It was no accident that Congress delegated its functions to the President."

"Power of this magnitude is dangerous from the economic as well as from the political point of view. No man's judgment is sufficiently inflexible to justify giving him control—either in private business or in government—over the standard of living, the savings, and the destiny of his fellow citizens. When the decision of one man affects an entire country, a wrong decision means national disaster."

"The Republican Party opposes unlimited executive power for another reason. This reason is that the world-wide trend away from democracy means but one thing—that one thing is WAR. Any weakening of democracy here, means the final rout of democracy everywhere."

"The temper of the American public is no longer complacent. It has definitely set its face against monopoly and unfair trade practices. The pledge in our platform is not mere words. It does not mean to me fruitless inquiries that impede recovery and delay re-employment. To me it means not only the steady relentless enforcement of existing laws but the strengthening of those laws. And it means the enactment of such additional legislation, as is necessary to put an end to monopoly, unfair trade practices and all special privilege. Only if we follow this course can we escape the system of government regulated monopolies sponsored by this Administration."

"If you do not believe this, you had better not vote for me. For I am pledged by the Republican platform to save our system of free enterprise."

YORK STATE LABOR
BACKS ROOSEVELT

The opening session at Syracuse last week the convention of the New York State Federation of Labor declared unanimously for the election of President Roosevelt and endorsed the administration of Governor Herbert H. Lehman.

Supporting the resolution endorsing President Roosevelt, George W. President of the State Federation, emphasized the fact that President Roosevelt always has been a human rights paragon to property rights.

"A man in our nation's history," said, "has ever accomplished for our common citizenry and man is better qualified to lead in the direction of a better for those who toil. The work of this State are fully alive to changed conditions since 1933 are completely convinced that changes are due to the earnest and sincere efforts of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Every effort has been for abolition of industrial slavery for the industrial freedom and movement of the toilers of our country. His policy still remains human rights are paramount to property rights."

A resolution endorsing President Roosevelt was signed by Mr. Joseph P. Ryan, vice-president and John M. O'Hanlon, secretary of the Federation.

The New State Federation of Labor, through the undersigned, has a resolution endorsing President Roosevelt and the committee. After survey and analysis, it is unanimously of the opinion that the aspirations, ambitions and well-being of the working people of our State and nation lie in the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The committee not only recognizes the endorsement of Franklin D. Roosevelt for President, but also all of the workers of the State of New York to not only support President Roosevelt in this presidential campaign, but to work for his re-election, so that the cause of humanity may be advanced and the path of the toilers of the State and nation made more tolerable."

YOUTH REVIVAL GIVES COLLEGE MEN A BREAK

Large students graduated this year are finding more jobs awaiting them at any time since 1931, according to Robert F. Moore, secretary of appointments at Columbia University, New York. Mr. Moore reports that large industrial business organizations are faced by an alarming gap in their ranks, as the result of depression.

There is evidence that business is returning to normal activity and the stimulus of the New Deal is found in the fact that organizations which laid off large numbers of employees are seeking help from the bottom and are turning to young college men to fill increasing vacancies.

More reported that whereas a young man's salary last year was $100 a month, this year has risen to $125 for the better part of the year. "Nothing," he added, "is better up to $45 a month. With many companies confronted with the fact that for years they have failed to turn to fill in the better jobs, the men at the top are in need of assistance. They are seeking to college-bred young men who are trained quickly to meet the needs of renewed business and

1,200 TAXES A DAY FOR THE AVERAGE MAN

CHICAGO.—With federal indirect ("hidden") taxes increased approximately 25 per cent during the Roosevelt administration, there are now more than 1,200 hidden taxes involved in the daily life of the average man, Robert Kratky, director of the tax division of the Republican National Committee here, declared. He said there are 300 more in the daily life of the average woman.

"The man's day begins with the alarm clock, on which there is a luxury tax of ten cents, in addition to 30 other hidden taxes," Mr. Kratky said.

"Taxes now take 25 per cent of the cost of underwear, 20 to 40 per cent of the cost of soap and 21 per cent of the cost of razor blades."

"There are 44 taxes on a pair of overalls, 62 on a shirt, 63 on a suit, 53 on a hat, 60 on a tie, 62 on a pair of socks and 63 on an overcoat. Taxes take $3.53 on an $18 suit, 59 cents on a $3 hat, 20 cents on a $1 tie, 7 cents from a 35 cent pair of socks and $5 from a $25 overcoat."

At the breakfast table, Mrs. Average Man can help her husband count.

"Fifty taxes take 2 cents from a dime loaf of bread," said Mr. Kratky. Sugar's 43 taxes represent 23 per cent of the cost. A 35 cent pound of meat would have cost only 28 cents, but for 38 taxes.

"With this drain on the family income, the living struggle has become more burdensome day after day under the Roosevelt administration. There is not much chance of 'The Forgotten Man' getting a raise from his company, for his firm is paying taxes at the rate of more than $1,500 a year per man employed."

Workers Bear High Cost of Bureaucracy; Hurley BUCKHANNON, W. VA. — The New Deal has saddled upon the backs of workers the most extensive bureaucracy and the greatest debt in the history of the nation, Patrick J. Hurley, former secretary of war, said here in an address at a district Republican rally.

Most of the obligations the New Deal has created against the taxpayers are held by the "money changers," Mr. Hurley said. "The taxpayer will not only have to pay the amount borrowed by the New Deal, but will have to pay in interest and service charges to the 'money changers' $2 for every dollar borrowed."

"While the New Deal is telling the workers of its friendship for them and telling the young people how it admires and loves them, it is at the same time handing the workers and the rising generation the bill for all its waste."

NO COMMENT NEEDED

Earl Smith, who resides six miles west of Chamato and who signed up with the government in the conservation program, recently was forced to burn two and one-half acres of oats to comply with his agreement, this in spite of the fact the corn crop in his section is a total loss and other feed is very scarce.

The oats were cut and raked into windrows and Mr. Smith signed on giving the surplus oats to some of the neighbors who were badly in need of feed, but he was informed that this was not permissible and that the oats must be burned.

The oats burned represented 10 per cent of Smith's total acreage and he was told that he would receive between five and seven dollars an acre for the reduction. Payment of which would probably be made in September.

The oats would have provided around 60 bushels to the new Mr. Smith has been buying feed for his livestock store burning the surplus oats. — Erie, Kans. Record

CHAPTER VII

DAWN was breaking over Wilton when a trim motor car, bearing a New York number plate, slipped quietly into the village and drew up at the town garage.

From it stepped a man, small and somewhat bent. "May I leave my car here?" he inquired of the lad who was sweeping out the building.

"Sure."

"Fill her up for me, please. And you might clean her a bit. Can you tell me where a Mr. Heath is staying?"

"Heath? The chap who ran aground on the Crocker Cove sand bar? He's over to The Widder's."

"Where's that?"

"The Widder lives out yonder at the Homestead."

"How does one get there?"

"Well, the only way to reach the house when the tide's full, as 'tis now, is to row."

"Where'd I find a boat?"

"That I couldn't say. The Widder keeps her farther side of the channel. Maybe, though, if you was to go down to the beach some fisherman would give you a lift across. Most any of 'em would admire to if you're a friend of Marcia Howe's."

The stranger bowed but offered no comment. "Thank you," he replied briefly. With this said he took me to the beach."

"Stranger as an arrow."

With a swiftness additional words or time the stranger had reached and started off brightly in the direction indicated. When he reached the beach he paused, scanning eagerly the altered house beyond the channel. Fluctuating on one in sight, he dragged from the shore a yellow dory, clambered into it, and catching up the oars began to row toward the dwelling, silhouetted against the water and the glory of the morning sky.

In the meantime, both Marcia and Sylvia had awakened early and were sitting.

The kitchen fire was already snapping merrily to the stove, however, and the table was spread before the latter made her appearance.

She came in, carrying a thick envelope.

"Why, Sylvia, how you startled me!" Marcia exclaimed. "I did not hear you come down stairs. Why are you up so early?"

"I'm going to town to catch the morning mail. I have to get off this letter to Horne. You see, if I didn't answer promptly he might think the candy had gone astray," explained the girl.

"Oh, of course, you must thank him for the candy," Marcia agreed. "Still, is it necessary to do so in such a rush—to walk to the village this morning?"

"I mean to row over."

"I'm afraid you can't, dear. I discovered last night the boat was gone. Evidently, it must have been appropriated when he was here yesterday. I can't give him a good lecture when I can't find it. It is a serious thing to be left here with no way of getting to land. In fact, here we are with this tremendously important letter that must be posted immediately—this day!"

With eyes twinkling with laughter, Marcia cast a mischievous glance at her companion.

"It isn't just to thank Horne for the candy that I'm writing," that young lady, replied evasively. "You see, he asked if he might come to Wilton for his summer vacation. He has to know so he can make his plans."

"I see," smiled Marcia. "Under such conditions, I suppose the sooner the letter is sent the better."

"The sooner I start, the sooner I shall be back. I suppose," Sylvia answered with feigned reluctance. "Men are so unreasonable. Any errand?"

"Not today, thanks. Just the mail."

"I'll wait for it."

The eagerness betrayed by the reply left not the slightest doubt that Sylvia would wait, and gladly. As the door closed behind her, Marcia smiled optimistically.

She prepared Heath's breakfast tray, and was about to take it up stairs when there was a gentle knock at the kitchen door.

A stranger stood upon the threshold.

"Is Mr. Stanley Heath staying here?" inquired he.

"Yes."

"I am Currier. Mr. Heath sent for me."

"Of course! Come in, won't you? Mr. Heath is expecting you. I'll tell him you are here."

"You needn't do that, madam. If you will just show me where he is—"

"At the head of the stairs."

"Very good. Thank you, madam. I will go up."

Marcia soon heard the invalid's voice, imperative and eager, each sentence ending with an interrogation. The tones of silence which intervened and which at first she took to be pauses, she presently decided represented the inaudible and subdued replies of Currier.

To judge from the sounds, Heath was pouring out an avalanche of questions.

"He has forgotten all about breakfast," murmured Marcia. "I'll carry it up."

She mounted the stairs softly, that her coming might break in as little as possible upon the conversation of her two guests.

"He was alone in the library when I went in," Heath was saying, "and turned so white I feared she might faint or scream. Luckily she did neither."

"You know what I'm after," I said—the jewels. Come hand them over." At that, she began to cry.

"Quickly," I repeated. "Some one may come."

"With that she produced the jewel case, pouring out a torrent of explanations.

"I stopped no longer than I had to, I assure you. In no time I had made my getaway. Every detail of my plan would have gone smoothly but for the fog. I lost my bearings completely. Imagine my amazement at finding myself here."

Marcia waited to hear no more. So Heath really had taken the jewels from the resisting woman who owned them—taken them against her will and made off with them!

He owned it!

Nay, more! Far from regretting what he had done, in his tone rang a note of satisfaction in his accomplishment.

She had never believed him guilty. Not until she heard the bitter irrefragable confession from his own lips did she waver, and even then she battled against the truth, refusing to be convinced. There must be some explanation, she told herself. Nevertheless, the shock was overwhelming.

Her head swam. Her heart beat wildly.

"I must not give way!" she reiterated to herself. "I must put on a brave front. He must not suspect I know."

It took a few moments for her to regain her grip on herself, to drag back her ebbing strength.

Then she knocked at the door.

"Here is your coffee, Mr. Heath," she called.

"Come in, Mrs. Howe. I'm afraid we've delayed you. I had entirely forgotten about breakfast and so, I'll be bound, had Currier. You had my right-hand man down stairs, I take it."

"You found the house without trouble?" Marcia inquired, making an effort to address the newcomer in a natural off-hand manner.

"Yes, Mrs. Howe. A young man at the garage directed me."

As Marcia turned to go, her unfailing courtesy prompted her to say:

"Mr. Currier is welcome to stay if he wishes to, Mr. Heath. We can put him up perfectly well."

"Oh, no. He is returning directly. Nevertheless, I greatly appreciate your kindness."

"Mrs. Heath is anxious," put in Currier. "She begged me to come home as soon as possible that she might know how Mr. Heath was. Naturally she has been much worried."

"There, there, Currier—that will do," broke in Stanley Heath, frowning. "And now, since Mrs. Howe is here and is in our secret, I may as well tell you that part of the mission on which you came cannot be accomplished. You cannot take the gems back with you to New York. A calamity has befallen them."

"A calamity, sir?"

"Mrs. Howe helped me conceal the jewels downstairs in a hiding place under the kitchen floor," continued Stanley Heath. "When she went to get them they were gone."

"It is all very mysterious," broke in Marcia, taking up the tale. "I cannot in any way account for their disappearance and am much distressed. I cannot even see how anybody had the chance to take them. No one knew they were there."

"Would you be willing to show me where they were hidden and allow me to investigate?"

"Certainly. I'll take you downstairs now, while we have the opportunity. When do you start back?"

"That is for Mr. Heath to decide."

"Right off. As soon as you can get under way," Stanley Heath said decisively. "Go down now with Mrs. Howe, since she is so gracious, and have your breakfast. Examining, too, the place where we concealed the jewel case. You may discover a clue she has missed."

Preceding Currier into the kitchen, Marcia went straight to the hearth and pointed to the brick at her feet.

"It was here we put the jewel case," she said.

"I think, with your permission, I will take up the brick," the little man at her elbow quietly announced.

"Certainly," acquiesced Marcia. Taking out his knife, Currier knelt and soon had the brick out of its hole.

Beneath it lay the jewel case, wrapped as before in Stanley Heath's monogrammed handkerchief.

Marcia could not believe her eyes.

"But—but—it wasn't there when I looked, I could swear it wasn't."

"Who could have taken it out? And if some one did why return anything so valuable?" Currier inquired.

"I don't know. I do not understand it at all," the woman replied. "There is something uncanny about the whole affair."

"Well, at any rate, the gems are here now," said Currier in a matter-of-fact tone.

"Mr. Heath will be much relieved. Shall I go up and—"

"I'll go," Marcia cried. "It won't take me a minute. I'll be right back."

"As you prefer."

Off flew Marcia.

Her haste, the radiance of her face must have suggested to the stranger a thought that had not occurred to him before, for after she had gone, he stood immovable in the middle of the floor looking after her.

Then a slow, shadowy smile passed across his features.

"So—ho!" he muttered. "Ho!"

He was still absorbed in his thoughts when Marcia, breathless and rejoined him.

"I can think of nothing but jewels and their recovery. I'm happy I had completely forgotten your breakfast. You might see Mr. Heath while I'm doing it ready."

"I will do that. I shall be in at once and he may have orders for me, or perhaps a letter for Mrs. Heath."

"Mrs. Heath!" Marcia repeated as if the name suddenly before her conscience. "Yes, of course."

Then turning her head she inquired with studied candor: "How long, I wonder, do you think that as soon as he is made the journey he would go home. This climate is damp and he will, perhaps, prefer to stay away from the sea. Have any influence with him, you please advise it?"

The man's small, gray eyes twinkled.

"I have no influence with Heath," replied he. "Mrs. Howe, however, shall I tell her 'I wish you would.'"

An hour later My Unknown weighed anchor and disappeared out to sea, carrying with her the jewels.

Marcia watched until the snowy ripple foaming in the bay had disappeared, then she sat a chair and brushed her eyes across her eyes.

"And that's the end of my madness!" she muttered. "My—"
